While not entirely unexpected the news nevertheless reated a mild disturbance in Inside Republican circles in Chicago. It was generally admitted that the separation of Mr. Dover from the campaign at this ime would render the work of Chairman Hitchcock doubly onerous.

Various reasons have been ascribed for the impending resignation of Mr. Dover but the principal one is believed to be that he belonged to the old McKinley Republicans in party politics, and is, atmosphere charged with the younger brand of Rooseveltism.

Mr. Dover entered the national committee under Mark Hanna in the 1900 campaign, having previously been associated intimately with the first McKinley cam-
